

PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION

Addresses of Deep Interest to Members of the National Congress Were Delivered—Speeches by Miss Maud Summers and Others.

By Associated Press.
New York, Sept. 10.—The congress of the National Playgrounds Association met again today. Several addresses of great interest to the workers of the day were made by Miss Maud Summers, Arthur Leland and Dr. Henry Curtis.

Arthur Leland urged that public playgrounds be established and maintained during the winter in all towns and cities of the United States. He said that children should be provided with playing space where they could vent their exuberance during the wintry season.

He made a plea for the more barbaric virtues of loyalty, physical courage and endurance and heroic altruism, which he said should be developed with expression, he said, not in the school room nor in the home, but on the playground.

"It seems to me that the properly developed out-of-doors water playground," he went on to say, "offers an unequalled field for the proper development of those instincts which our summer playgrounds are handling to good advantage, but which during the winter times are obliged to find their expression on the street. For children in the country, winter is the best play time, but for city children there is little chance for winter sports and games. Our playground equipments of apparatus should be so designed as to adapt themselves to both summer and winter uses. For instance, the playground slide may be sprinkled so as to make an ice slide. A very good toboggan slide could be adopted for use from staves, each child furnishing his own toboggan. Playground slides may also be used for sled coasts in place of hills. A skating rink is very easy to maintain in cold climates and a most satisfactory manner of amusing children.

Dr. Henry S. Curtis, Secretary of the Association, described the plans which the playground workers of Washington D. C. are successfully carrying out in their efforts to get the children interested in systematized athletics. Dr. Curtis referred to the foreign criticism that American athletics are highly specialized, that few participate and that there are tendencies to rowdism and professionalism. These criticisms, so far as just, Dr. Curtis said, were due to the fact that athletics have not heretofore been given educational control. It was found at Washington that lack of system and regular practice resulted in indifference on the part of the children. In order to correct this condition, a system of athletics was started and tournaments were held between city playgrounds. The result was striking. A much larger number of regular teams had been organized. Boys came to play with enthusiasm and to practice regularly. Sectional feeling had been largely eliminated, and the attendance had been greatly increased. Interest was aroused by printing the name of winners in the newspapers.

In conclusion, Dr. Curtis said that although the first athletic meets held between the different playgrounds of Washington frequently terminated in stone fights, owing to differences of opinion among the children as to the fairness of the umpire, this element of roughness has since been done away with by the adoption of rules disqualifying the team whose members or "rooters" use "rough-house tactics."

Miss Maud Summers, of Cincinnati, deplored the style of comic pictures in which evil is ascribed to children, and emphasized the importance of placing upon decent, cunning and respect for gray hairs—pictures that teach children to laugh when boys throw water from an upper window upon an aged apple woman, or outwit an infirm old man.

"Humor has its place in the literature of childhood," she said, "and it would be well if it were given to children could be found capable of substituting genuine fun, for the coarse, vulgar type now so prominent. It is of the utmost importance that the picture, or story for children shall have at its heart a spiritual truth, or, in other words, that it shall have a right motive. This truth may be any one of the many virtues such as generosity, kindness, hospitality, courage, heroism, chivalry, etc. It shall be worked out in terms of cause and effect, according to the immutable law of literature, the law of compensation, which rewards the good, and of retributive justice, which punishes the bad."

"In the end," said Miss Summers in conclusion, "the player and as a finished product should give beauty and perfection, not only to the body of the child, but also to the soul. It should include training in the 3 H's of head, heart and hand, as well as training in the 3 R's of reverence, respect and responsibility. No lesser ideal will satisfy those who see the possibilities of the playground in adding to the sum of child happiness and betterment."

HAVE YOU A BABY?
Then watch it closely. And above all things don't let it suffer for any length of time with worms—that is fatal. If its complexion gets yellow and puffy, if it is listless, cross or peevish, give it White's Cream Vermifuge. The only cure that never fails and has no bad effects.

DEMOCRATIC GAIN IN IOWA

Discord in Republican Ranks Promises Gain For Bryan & Kern.

Special to The Journal.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 10.—Iowa's thirteen electoral votes will be cast for Taft. This is practically certain. It is equally certain that Taft will hardly come within a hundred thousand of Roosevelt's great plurality of 158,766. Political wise men believe that the republican plurality will not exceed 50,000. Several reasons are advanced for such a belief.

In the first place, the fight over the senatorial nomination has caused "bad blood" between the G. O. P. leaders of Iowa and as a result, it is likely that thousands of disgruntled republicans will vote for Bryan in order to express their displeasure with the conduct of state affairs. On the other hand, the democratic party is now a harmonious whole, with not a discordant note in the songs of praise for their people. An era of peace and good fellowship, such as has not been known for sixteen years, has apparently commenced in the democratic camps of Iowa.

The second element that will likely serve to reduce the republican plurality is Mr. Bryan himself. The nebraskaian is a next door neighbor, and local pride plays its part in the admiration which many Iowa farmers entertain for the democratic standard bearer. Mr. Bryan has done persistent missionary work in Iowa, one of his most important addresses having been delivered in this order recently, and there is no doubt that his labors will bring forth fruit on election day.

Taking into consideration all these facts, it yet remains that the normal republican majority is too large to be overcome. The campaign managers of the republican party are resting easy on that score, at the same time keeping an eye peeled for trouble.

There is no question that Iowa democrats are encouraged as they have never been before. The gold members of their party who booted Bryan in 1896 and 1900 and the Bryan democrats who refused to support Parker in 1904 have clasped hands once more, and preliminary indications establish that they will work zealously in behalf of Mr. Bryan. The latter is encouraging them in every possible way. He chose Des Moines as the first city in which to begin the campaign outside of his native state. He has made it a point to get in personal contact with as many of the Iowa voters as possible. Unquestionably he realizes as much as any man that the farmer, with his rural free delivery which brings him his paper daily and which puts him in close touch with the doings of men and events, cannot be convinced by one speech as was possible ten years ago. It is this realization that is responsible for the purpose of the democrat to make the present campaign one of personal rather than of general appeal.

So far as the laboring class is concerned, it is not in such numbers in this state as to affect seriously the result. The railroads have quite a large force of employees. Then there are coal miners, and finally some factories. It is estimated, moreover, that at least two-thirds of these men are democrats, and 14,000 socialist votes were cast in 1904. Nevertheless, it is their duty to hold the republicans in line, and, as in Illinois, Missouri, and elsewhere, the campaign of republican education on anti-injunction has begun.
